Academic Listening Skills

The Listening section measures your ability to understand spoken English. In academic settings, students must be able to listen to lectures and conversations. Academic listening is typically done for one of the three following purposes:

Listening for basic comprehension

- comprehend the main idea, major points, and important details related to the main idea. (Comprehension of all details is not necessary.)

Listening for pragmatic understanding

- recognize a speaker's attitude and degree of certainty
- recognize the function or purpose of a speaker's statement

Connecting and synthesizing[5] information

- recognize the organization of information presented
- understand the relationships between ideas presented (for example, compare/contrast, cause/effect, or steps in a process)
- make inferences[6] and draw conclusions based on what is implied in the material
- make connections among pieces of information in a conversation or lecture
- recognize topic changes (for example, digressions[7] and aside statements[8]) in lectures and conversations, and recognize introductions and conclusions in lectures

Question!

- Rank the following from the most important for TOEFL listening to the least important.

A. Reciting words
B. Working on TPOs
C. Dictation/听抄
D. Just listening
E. 拜佛

Common problems in test prep

- TPO reliance
- Mass 听抄/dictation
- “key word” only
- No prediction/not thinking
- No reflections
- Watching too much TV

- And many other small-ish problems.

TPO reliance

- How many TPOs have you done?

Things TPOs can/can’ t help you with

- Vocabulary
- Grammar
- Understanding of pronunciation features
- Note-taking
- Background knowledge of US colleges
- ~~Background knowledge of academic topics~~

You should…

- Learn from your TPOs.
  - Words & grammar
  - Pronunciation features
  - Patterns and rules
  - Note-taking

Mass 听抄/dictation

- Is dictation useful?

Problems

- Takes too much time.
- Takes too much energy.
- Not always a learning activity.

You should…

- Dictate when there is a need.
- Learn from your dictation.
  - Words/grammar/idioms.
  - Pronunciation features.

Key word only

- Just listen for key words, hoping to catch everything.
- Problem: you can’ t just react, unless you’ re really good.
- Problem: how can you get all the key words?

You should...

- Get key words.
- Learn to associate them with real questions.

广告页

No prediction/Not thinking

- Reacting is always slower than proactive thinking.
- What should you try to predict?

No reflections

- Doing practice ≠ learning

You should…

- Reflect on your strategies.
- Reflect on your notes.
- Reflect on your predictions.
- And improve.

Watching too much TV

- Why might this be a problem?

Other problems…

- Lack of execution.
- Using wrong materials and methods.
- Relying on luck…

How to correctly prepare for TOEFL listening?

- Get your schedule/time right.
- Work on your basics.
  - Words/idioms/grammar
  - Pronunciation features
- Learn TOEFL listening.
  - Listening structures and predictions
  - Key words and question types
- Work on your TPOs.
  - Prepare, work, reflect
- Improve notetaking skills.
- Full set TPO tests before the exam.

One site…

- https://www.lextutor.ca/vp/comp/

Question!

- Order the following things. Which should you do first? Which should you do later? Which is the last? Which is not really necessary?

A. Recite words
B. Read after listening passages
C. Get a schedule
D. Work on TPOs
E. Learn listening structures
F. 报名雅思
G. Work on note-taking
